

Danil Loginov

Lawyer Danil Loginov, born in 1987, studied law at the University of Passau, where he passed the 1st state examination. He completed his legal clerkship in Munich, specialising in commercial law. He expanded his knowledge and practical experience as a trainee lawyer in the legal department of one of Europe's leading media groups, where he specialised in competition law matters. He was admitted to the bar in 2015.

Mr Loginov has been working for the law firm Meisterernst Rechtsanwälte since 2015 - with an interruption due to a stay abroad. He advises and represents national and international companies in the food industry in all matters relating to food law. His legal practice focuses in particular on product labelling and advertising as well as advising on demarcation issues and cross-border distribution (customs law; import).

Mr Loginov is the author of specialist articles in legal journals and regularly gives lectures at seminars on the main topics of his work.

He advises in German and English.
